C

① Do you want to welcome a new pet into your home? If your answer is yes, remember to get one from an animal shelter(收容所), not from a pet shop. Shelters have different kinds of animals, from cats and dogs to birds and other small animals. There are many great reasons for getting a pet from a shelter.

② Each year, 2,700,000 dogs and cats are killed in a painless(无痛的) way in the USA, not because they are ill, but because there are too many pets in shelters. So when you get a pet from a shelter, you not only save an animal's life but also make room for another animal in need of help.

③ Also if you buy a dog from a pet shop, it means you may get it from a puppy(幼崽) mill. A puppy mill is a bad place where the owner(主人) makes dogs have more puppies. When the mother dogs can't have any puppy, the owner usually throws(扔) them away or even kill them. So, if we stop buying animals from pet shops, then there will be no more puppy mills.

④ Now, are you ready to make a pet be part of your family? Get one as your best friend, and you can make your world and an animal's life better.

8. Which is the best way to get a pet according to the writer?

- |                             |                     |
|-----------------------------|---------------------|
| A. From an animal hospital. | B. From a pet shop. |
| C. From an animal shelter.  | D. From a farm.     |

9. Which of the following can show the structure of the text?

10. What can we know from the text?

- A. All animals in shelters are not healthy or beautiful.
- B. Getting a pet from a shelter cannot help the shelter to work better.
- C. We may save more animals by getting more pets from shelters.
- D. A puppy mill is a warm and nice home for animals and we can get animals for free.

11. Which is the best title for the text?

- |                              |                                         |
|------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|
| A. No pets, no puppy mills   | B. A shelter for animals                |
| C. A warm home for lost dogs | D. Give animals from the shelter a home |

D

We can't remember when we started to take our mobile phones to a dinner table. We often do this, especially(尤其) when we eat out. Once a dish comes, instead of starting to eat, we take out our mobile phones and take photos. Later, we post them onto the Internet, waiting to be "liked". Then we take out our mobile phones from time to time to see how many "likes" we get. The dinner doesn't seem(似乎) to be the focus.

Does that sound familiar(熟悉的) to you? Do you do that often? If not, how do you feel when others do that when having dinner with you?

Recently, some scientists do a study. It shows that spending time taking photos of food makes the food not that delicious any more. In the study, some people are asked to take photos before they enjoy food. As a result, the more photos they take, the less delicious the food seems to be. So, why not stop taking photos and just enjoy the food in front of you?

There are also some other bad influences of taking photos of food before meals. After posting the photos onto the Internet, one can't stop taking out his mobile phone many times. "Does everyone like my photos? I wish a lot of people like them!" It seems that your mobile phone calls your name all the time, even when you are with people around you. Also, others may think that you think your "likes" are important, but not them.

So, next time you go out to have dinner with your family or friends, how about not taking photos of food? Let the food be delicious as it is and share your life with people around you. It will be a wonderful time.

12. What do people often do at a dinner table these days?
  - A. People talk on the Internet.
  - B. People enjoy delicious food.
  - C. People take photos of food before having meals.
  - D. People like taking photos with their family and friends.
13. What does the underlined word "influences" in Paragraph 4 mean?
  - A. Changes.
  - B. Results.
  - C. Habits.
  - D. Choices.
14. What does the underlined sentence in Paragraph 4 mean?
  - A. People often treat mobile phones as people around them.
  - B. People may get phone calls when they are with friends.
  - C. People does not take out their mobile phones at all.
  - D. People focus on mobile phones instead of people around them.
15. Why does the writer write this text?
  - A. To ask us to go out and have a wonderful meal.
  - B To show that mobile phones are important to us.
  - C. To tell us that we should take photos when eating out.
  - D. To let us focus on people around us and not always use the mobile phones.
